GOOD SEED PAYS

The choice of good seed repays the extra cost many times over. An increase of one hushel per acre will more than pay for such cost.

It is unnecessary to buy it each year, for with ordinary care registered or certified seed will continue to produce an improved commercial crop for several years. These are factors which should be seriously considered by all farmers.

Royal Commission an Alberta Coal

The Royal Commission to deal with the general subject of coal development in Alberta was scheduled opened its deliberations in Edmonton on April 16th

The Commission sat under the chairmanship of Mr. Justice Commol with Mr. Justice McLaurin and vr.

Angus Morrison of U. M. W. of A, as members.

The establishment of new and permanent markets represent a vitally important problem facing the industry today. Many of the mines have been forced into mechanization as a result of labour short-age resulting from the war. Returning veterans will include many miners who will seek re-employment in the mines. To effect this satisfactorily new markets must be reached and transportation on rates to same become established on a basis that will permit the Alberta product to compete at points beyond the province particularly in Ontario. Mr. J. R. McNicol, M. P., offers as an objective a million and a half tons of Nova Scotia coal and a similar quantity of Alberta coal to be shipped annually to Ontario.

Canadian Citizenship

HIS CITIZENSHIP IS A SUBJECT to which the average Canadian gives little thought, although to be a citizen of Canada and of the British Commonwealth should be a matter of pride and satisfaction to us all. The population of Canada is made up of people of many different racial origins, but we are all Canadians, sharing in the privileges and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship, and it would be to the advantage of the people and of the country as a whole, if more serious thought were given to the many implications of these privileges and responsibilities. Hope for permanent world peace is centred on the climination of racial barriers and the cultivation of international co-operation and goodwill. The first step in this direction is to have unity of thought and purpose at home, for no nation can hope to achieve on an international scale, what it has not accomplished among its own people. mong its own people.

Are Classed By Racial Origin

Dr. H. M. Tory, a former president of the University of Alberta, and a leading Canadian educationist, stated in a recent address that even members of families who have made Canada their home for several generations, tend to regard themselves as English, Irish, Scotch or French Canadians. This may be due in part to the fact that for statistical purposes Canadians are still classed according to their racial defined sense of our own citizenship in our own Canadian antion within the British Commonwealth," would be the best basis for a fuller understanding of our relation to the Empire, and to the other nations of the world. Situated as we are, in close proximity to two great powers, the United States and Russia, and bound also by ties of tradition and sentiment to Great Britain and France, there is no doubt but that Canada must be prepared to play an important part in world affairs in the years to come

An Analysis Of The Food Situation In France

Statistics are wonderful. We quote from a learned discourse on the food situation:

"The French had the impression that we would supply them with 200,000 tons of food supplies flast year. We sent them 282,000 tons. Almost an empty hand."

Empty, indeed, if those Frenchmen eat that way. For 200,000,000 tons divided by 40,000,000 Frenchmen is five tons per Frenchman. Five tons is 10,000 pounds. There are 365 days in a year, so every Frenchman eats 27 peands of chow per day. We have heard they at ewell, but who would have thought that well. As the world's best cooks we have no doubt that French chefs recommend a little pinch of salt with one's statistics.—Chicago Dally News.

ALWAYS DEPENDABLE WRAPPED AIRTIGHT TO ENSURE POTENCY

- By -LARRY STERNIG

Stephan Dajes wasn' a family man. He'd been too busy being a success to give much thought to acquiring a wife. But his inherent love for children was nenchelees strong. That's why, though extremely weary after his long journey, he made no effort to disperse the group of curious youngsters whom his nephew had brought home with him after school. They swamped him with questions. "We was studying about the Balkans in our jography class. Did you cally live there?"

"Do the kids dress different from us, Mister?"

Joe says you own a chemical facthat must be fun. I got a istry set last Christmas; do you them?"

says you're awful rich, Mister.

"Joe says you're awful rich, Mister. Are you?"
Patiently and in stilled English, Uncle Steve answered all questions. All but the last: Was he rich?
His mind reverted to the days when he had been but little older than these energetic American children. Formal education already lay behind him. Ahead was work, first on a farm and then in a factory.

In the factory he did just about to reverthing, from polishing doorknobs to preparing finished textiles for shipping. A workday for Stephan was often twelve hours, or even fourteen. Small wonder that he pald seant heed to international strife, to rumbings of political jealouses. Stephan's alm was to make good. If he worked hard, honestly, success would be his. And it was. Interested in dyes, he managed by saving over a long period of years to epen his own establishment. Unexcelled products at fair prices plus a gift for making and keeping friends served as the platform on which he built a thriving business.

And it was. Interested in dyes, he managed by saving over a long period of years to open his own establishment. Unexcelled products at fair prices plus a gift for making and keeping friends served as the platform on which he built a thriving business.

Then came the war, but except for country, the Balkans seemed sisted to remain at peace.

Vain hope. The little countries were but pawRs in the manoeuvrings; phese mosquitos to they can be for a fanatie who forced upon them his unwelcome "protection", Stephils under the experimental stage by mar's country regained territory pre-which promised co-operation. Stephan, little versed in politica, voiced his opposition. "Our independence is goose-stepping toward oblivion," he predicted.

"Nonsense," scoffed one of his friends, a minor Government official. "That piece of land is but a fraction of what will be given us when our riend has conquered England. We will grow, become more independent than before."

"I have faith in my country, Karosi," Stephan affirmed, "but in fairy tales. . ." he shook his head. A woek later the same official waddled into Stephan's modest office. "You seem to be doing less business these days, my friend."

"You seem to be doing less business these days, my friend."

"You have the transportation. Not that my products are bulky, but, ... "Stephan shrugged. "What troubles me is the necessity for discharging some of my employes."

"Transport facilities are at the disposal of home who ship essentials," Karosi enlightened. "Now if your firm were to manufacture. . explosives ... "he paused significantly. Stephan stared. "I do believe you are serious."

Stephan counted his assets: Residence in a country whose Government didn't make a mockery of that famous statue on Bedloc's Island; the comfort of being with people; whose affection for him didn't decrease along with his fortune; and the opportunity to become what he wanted.

He laid a gentle hand on the touseled head of his questioner and said solemnly, "I think I am truly rich, my boy."

• You have reason for just pride if you have done all you could do, on the home front, to support the gallant effort of our men in active service.

If you have denied yourself pleasures and comforts to buy Victory Bonds . . . you, too, have played a part in helping your country's war effort.

You have worked and saved and lent your savings to your country. Without this help from you... and from millions of her citizens, your country could not have maintained the prominent place she now occupies among the freedom-loving nations.

Canada has the use of your savings to help to win victory. (You will have this money to use for your own needs later.)

Perhaps you wish you could have done more. Well, you will be asked to do more. Men who have come back will rell you that there is lots to do yet. Canadians are on active service, on the fighting fronts. More money is needed to support their effort.

You are asked to keep on working and saving and you will be asked to put more savings into Victory Bonds. They are the best investment any Canadian can make; an investment that every Canadian should make.
